

Government and Politics

	Government and Politics
Exam Board	Edexcel or AQA final decision to be made when more information available however in both cases students will need to study very similar areas as outlined below.
Course Entry Criteria	B in a GCSE Humanities subject.
Essential skills	The most important skills that you require are the ability to write well and structure your responses. You also need to be able to support your theoretical knowledge with practical examples.
Year 12	Content overview In year 12 the course will focus on Government and politics in the UK. Areas of study include democracy, participation, Parliament, the Prime Minister and Cabinet, elections and referendums pressure groups and the constitution. There will also be an introduction to political theory including liberalism and socialism.
Year 13	Content overview The year will begin with a conclusion to the study of political theory and then embark on a study related to American politics. The same themes will be considered in relation to America as in year 12 for the UK eg. Congress, the President, the constitution. There will be comparison between the 2 systems of government and their workings.
University requirements	If you choose to study politics to degree level you will find out about the theories and practices of power and governance, from local to international level. There are many politics and politics related course to follow at university, eg PPE. Oxford and LSE (part of the Russell group) will usually make offers which involve at least 1 A* and 2A grades although this can vary Essex B B B Sussex A A B- ABB
Related courses and careers	Politics works very well with a wide variety of other subjects and teaches a range of disciplines. Students often study Politics along with Humanities subjects, Economics, English, Modern Languages and many others. Politics is a very well respected subject by all, including the top universities. The skills taught therefore prepare students for a wide variety of careers including the legal profession and journalism. It's ideal if you're considering studying politics, sociology, ethics, advertising or journalism at university and is highly regarded by employers in industries including politics, international organisations, the media, government and the civil service.
Other Details	The most important requirement is your interest in the subject, including contemporary political events in Britain and the USA, and being prepared to work hard. This is a new subject for most students in year 12 so we do not assume any real knowledge - but a desire to understand and engage with the topics and then to be able to address the tasks. You will need to read a good quality newspaper and watch the news, if you already do this then this is the course for you!